June 14 Marks Anniversary of Bryan v. Itasca Decision

June 14th marks the anniversary of the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision in the case of Bryan v. Itasca County. The historic, unanimous decision was delivered by Justice William J. Brennan Jr. on June 14, 1976.

The Supreme Court ruled that Public Law 280 did NOT grant states civil regulatory jurisdiction over Native Americans living on reservations. This was a huge step forward in advancing tribal sovereignty throughout Indian Country.

Leech Lake Band member Helen Johnson and her husband Russell

Bryan, lived near S. Lake in the northern part of the Leech Lake Reservation. To this day, Helen still resides on the property over which the initial dispute arose. In 1972 they received a series of tax bills from Itasca County for their mobile home. The County was seeking a total of $147.95 from the couple, who could not afford to pay at the time.

They turned to the newly established Leech Lake Reservation Legal Services Project, now known as Anishinaabe Legal Services, for help. Over the next four years, their case made its way through the legal system, beginning in the District Court of Itasca County, all the way to the highest court of the land, where it was decided once and for all.

At the time of the decision, the most significant impact was the taxation of Native Americans. As history has shown, the impact was much greater. Just 11 years later another tribal case appeared before the U.S. Supreme Court for a decision.

This case is known as California v. Cabazon Band of Mission Indians and overturned the existing laws restricting the gaming industry on Native American Reservations in the U.S. Their main argument was that the laws restricting gambling in California were civil regulatory laws.

Using the decision rendered in Bryan v. Itasca, they successfully argued their position and the Supreme Court ruled in their favor. The Cabazon decision, which drew its substance from the Bryan decision, led to a rapid growth in the Indian Gaming industry.

The following year (1988) Congress passed the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. The rest is history.

“If Congress in enacting Pub. L. 280 had intended to confer upon the States general civil regulatory powers, including taxation, over reservation Indians, it would have expressly said so”

"Aaniin Anishinabe doog. Nashel' Bebeau nindishinikaanigoo. Awasasee nindoodem. Gaazaga skwaa ji me kaag nindoonjiba. Baaga 'ado waganing nindaa.

Hello. My name is Nashel' Bebeau. I belong to the clan Bull Head. I am a proud member of the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe.

I live in Ball Club, Minnesota. As a leader of the Young Women's Initiative of Minnesota, I represent the voices of 800 young women of color, including Native women.

Too often, we are told to be resilient. My leadership demands we build resilient systems for girls like us to thrive."

~ Remarks by Nashel' Bebeau, introducing the Young Women's Initiative of Minnesota onstage at the United State of Women Summit (May 5, 2018)

On May 5 and 6, I participated in a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to attend The United State of Women Summit in Los Angeles. For me, this was a huge step.

Living on the reservation and in northern Minnesota, we don't get the chance to experience opportunities like this. I'm so grateful to be a part of the Young Women's Initiative of Minnesota (YWI MN) and all the opportunities it provides, like this one, thanks to the Women's Foundation of Minnesota.

On Friday night, I worked on the speech I would be giving on the main stage before an audience of 5,000. I was nervous! I practiced with the other Young Women's Cabinet members, including Katelyn Vue, Kathy Santamaria-Mendez, Mys Helen Martin, and Raie Gessesse, who were really encouraging. On Saturday when I met girls from the seven other Young Women's Initiatives, I felt so motivated and couldn't wait to get on the stage and speak.

Summit, Day One

At 7 a.m., we were in line waiting for the doors to open and I was so anxious to get inside! As we walked into the auditorium and to our front row seats, I felt a feeling I can't describe.

Being surrounded by thousands of other young women leaders who share the same goals and mindset is so awesome. It's a feeling everyone should feel.

After the morning main session, which was so motivating, I attended the "Women of Color Leading the Resistance" breakout session. There, I was inspired to hear: "Women of color from all backgrounds have once again stepped forward to carry the torch and light the path."

After the session was over, I got to meet with Chrissie Castro, vice-chair of the Los Angeles City-County Native American Indian Commission. Since the Summit, we have exchanged a few emails to stay connected.

Whenever I travel, I always want to try

Participants that do not complete the Gen-I Challenge ahead of the Minnesota Tribal Youth Gathering must bring their idea/project for the Gen-I Challenge to the Gathering.

To register and learn more about the Gen-I Challenge, visit <https://aspennstitute.wufoo.com/forms/zkr0zsl1m6qyvp/>

COMPLETE THE GEN-I CHALLENGE – Fill out the form above to tell us what issues you want to address and how you plan to tackle them.* Taking the Challenge makes you part of the Gen-I National Native Youth Network administered by the Center for Native American Youth. Becoming an Ambassador makes you eligible for exclusive leadership opportunities beyond the Tribal Youth Gathering.

*On the Gen-I Challenge Form, select option C and use invitation code “MTYG” to apply for the event.

ACT – Within 30 days of taking the challenge, youth should work with other youth in their community or at their school to do something positive (for example, completing a volunteer project with a local organization or charity, hosting a meeting with other youth to brainstorm how to address an issue of concern in their community, or mentoring a younger person). Youth can use resources from CNAY, the Gen-I National Native Youth Network, and other Gen-I partners to help achieve their goal. Their local tribal youth councils, urban tribal youth groups, or other Native youth organizations can also be helpful resources.

CAPTURE – Youth should document their Gen-I efforts on the Challenge form, through a short summary. If you've already been part of positive change in your community, you may use that activity to take the Challenge, and share photos or videos of you in action. If you have an idea but haven't made progress yet, start by submitting a photo of yourself along with a summary of your idea, or perhaps a video describing your plans. If you have questions or need inspiration, email cnayinfo@aspennst.org.

SHARE – Youth should share their stories online using #MTYGand #IAMGenI, tagging @genindigenous on Facebook, Instagram, and/or Twitter.

something new. This trip: Korean BBQ. The lines were long, but that was alright because I met Jamie. We connected instantly on so many different topics, ate lunch together, and swapped information to stay in touch.

My second breakout session was “Answering the Call: Public Service in Today’s World,” featuring a panel that included Minneapolis City Councilor Andrea Jenkins and Minnesota State Representative Ilhan Omar. My favorite moment was when Rep. Omar, talking about running for office, said, “Spend a lot of time appreciating what’s in front of you, rather than what’s not.”

Young Women’s Initiatives at Center Stage

At 3:30 p.m., we’re all waiting backstage — me and seven other young women representative of YWIs across the country — trying hard not to be nervous. This was going to be our big moment to show everyone how our Young Women’s Initiatives are changing lives of young women in our states, cities, and across the country.

It’s time. We walk onto the stage and I proceed to the podium to deliver opening remarks on behalf of Minnesota. Talking on the main stage was a feeling I never want to forget.

Speaking in front of thousands can seem terrifying, but it was so motivating! Hearing everyone clapping and cheering really reassured me that when you are speaking, you have thousands of women behind you. You are never alone. No matter where you are, you have the support of thousands of women from all over the United States.

At the end of the afternoon was the moment we were all waiting for: former First Lady Michelle Obama! Her session was the highlight of the afternoon. (Watch the video of Michelle Obama and actress Tracee Ellis Ross in conversation. It’s terrific!)

Summit, Day Two

On the second and final day of the Summit, our Young Women’s Cabinet had the chance to meet with seven other Young Women’s Initiatives participating in the National Collaborative of Young Women’s Initiatives.

One of my favorite things about YWI? Minnesota has the only statewide Young Women’s Initiative. This is especially important to me, because if our YWI wasn’t statewide, the community I represent as a Native American woman from Greater Minnesota would not be included, and I would not be a part of the Young Women’s Cabinet.

Hearing about the work of other YWIs at the Summit made me really want to do even more. Minnesota was the only initiative at the Summit that included a Native American representative.

Being the only Native American in the room really motivated me to come back home and push our young Native American women leaders to show up, speak up, and lead our communities, reservations, and state to be all that we need it to be to truly serve young women like me, now and for future generations.

This is how we #ChangeCulture.
